

EDITORIAL

This anniversary, 20th edition of the journal Facta Universitatis – series Philosophy, Sociology, Psychology and History is here to announce a new Editorial Board, bringing with it a blending of experience and youth, a new redesigned appearance and electronic submissions enabled by the Open Journal Systems software. In addition, as a result of the efforts undertaken by the Rector's Office of the University of Niš, starting from this year the journal is now a part of the international EBSCOhost™ database. More immediate access to the international community is also facilitated by the electronic version of the journal, available at <http://casopisi.junis.ni.ac.rs/index.php/FUPhilSocPsyHist>. We hope that these aforementioned innovations will further enhance the quality and reputation of the Facta Universitatis – series Philosophy, Sociology, Psychology and History journal.

Our upcoming issues will publish original research articles and review articles, presentations given at international conferences, as well as contributions from young researchers and doctoral students, both those working at our local institutions and those working abroad, following an anonymous, positive review given by at least two reviewers. The journal will continue with its tradition of publishing book reviews of the latest editions published both in our local community and abroad. We will be inviting 'guest editors' to put together special issues in the field of philosophy, sociology, psychology and history, as well as any related fields, in accordance with the latest scientific trends.

In our first issue for 2014, we are publishing a short special issue "Questioning Globalization" with our guest editor Vesna Stankovic Pejnovic from the Institute of Political Studies in Belgrade. We would like to take this opportunity to offer her our thanks for all the effort she has put into the project.

On behalf of the Editorial Board,

Editor-in-Chief
Dragan Todorović
