

EDITORIAL NOTE

Dear Readers,

It is my distinct pleasure to present the newest volume of the Journal Facta Universitatis, Series: Law and Politics, dedicated to the pressing and multifaceted themes that define our contemporary moment. This issue brings together a diverse and thought-provoking selection of scholarly papers that pursue our journal's mission to foster interdisciplinary dialogue and critical inquiry, particularly on topics situated at the complex intersections of law, society, and politics. Each contribution offers a unique lens through which the author examines the dynamics of power, identity, governance, and justice in today's rapidly changing world.

We are proud to include works that address topics such as media and minority representation, the ethical implications of artificial intelligence, gender and criminal justice, economic regulation, and the evolving human rights landscape. Though diverse in focus, these themes are united by a common goal: to deepen our understanding of how modern societies can respond more equitably and effectively to the challenges of inclusion, accountability, and human dignity.

I extend my sincere gratitude to our authors for their intellectual rigor, commitment to scholarship, and engagement with issues of both theoretical and practical importance. I am equally thankful to the members of our editorial and review teams, whose dedication, insight, and academic integrity have been vital to the realization of this volume.

We hope this edition will not only serve as a valuable resource for scholars, practitioners, and policymakers but also inspire further research, debate, and critical reflection.

Editor-in-Chief,
Maja Nastić, LL.D.
